

CASO Document Management bridges the old and new

Since 2010, CASO Document Management exclusively uses and resells Contex large format scanners.

Digital archives created with Contex scanning solutions and ImageSilo®, the cloud content management system from Digitech Systems make working remotely easier for CASO customers.

Over the past few decades, the requirement for document management has remained constant. Yet, an ongoing challenge for many organizations is the divide between digital and legacy hard-copy files. For every new digital file, there are hundreds of hard copies in storage — sometimes overrunning valuable office space. Companies like CASO Document Management are solving this challenge by scanning volumes of customers' hard-copy documents at a rapid pace and storing them in an online repository for easy and secure access.

In a world where working remotely is to be expected — and planned for — this document management service is a necessity.

To create an efficient digital archive, CASO relies exclusively on Contex large format scanners and Digitech Systems' ImageSilo for cloud content management. The combined solution allows CASO to deliver high-quality service, exceeding customers' document management requirements.

Put to the test

One customer project especially put CASO to the test. The onsite archiving project involved more than 31,500 large format records to be captured with Contex scanners and uploaded for management in ImageSilo. It was a piece of cake for CASO, until the customer asked for the project to be completed in half the time.

CASO made the impossible possible with a Contex HD Ultra X paired with a Zero-Turn Scanning Productivity Center from National Azon. The combined solution helped to boost productivity by an astounding 400%.

With the new solution, CASO was able to complete its client's archiving project ahead of the accelerated schedule. This allowed the customer to downsize its office space sooner, saving thousands of dollars in operating expenses. However, more than the monetary savings, the customer values the improved efficiency gained from its secure online repository, especially with a remote staff.
